To Whom It May Concern:

In the challenging socio-political environment marked by rapid changes and ongoing debates, the Academies of Social Entrepreneurship has provided the Black Math Collective (BMC) with indispensable resources that include strategic planning tools, brilliant UCLA students, and a vital network of mentors. This support has been crucial in helping BMC continue its mission to empower underserved communities through Math equity, enabling the organization to expand its outreach and remain focused amidst external pressures and uncertainties.

The guidance and mentorship from the Academies have empowered Leaders throughout the world to navigate the complexities of social entrepreneurship effectively, ensuring that their programs remain impactful, relevant and self-sustaining. This partnership not only bolsters BMC's capacity to serve but also strengthens its resolve to foster an environment where young minds can thrive in STEM fields, making it an essential support for BMC's continued success and growth.

Sincerely,

Kimlin C. Johnson
